FLEETING EIGHT TIMES

Local Boxer Gets a Terrific Beating—Winner Down in Sixth.

Mike O'Dowd of St. Paul last night won the world's middleweight championship from Al McCoy of Brooklyn in the sixth round of their encounter at the Clermont Sporting Club. Flat on his back, McCoy was taken to the hospital after having suffered his eighth defeat in ten bouts. The victory was a decisive one for O'Dowd, who was crowned a new title holder and a new title holder was crowned.

It was a terrific fight, harder to the last than any McCoy had ever fought. McCoy was downed in the fourth round in the sixth big gathering which taxed the capacity of the Clermont rink seemed to sense that the fight was over. St. Paul Boxer Fourteenth to Win Middleweight Title

MICHAEL O'DOWD is the fourteenth holder of the American middleweight championship and is the third American to win the world's title in that division. O'Dowd was 22 years old last April 8, having been born in St. Paul in 1895. He is of Irish parentage and, unlike McCoy, boxes under his real name.

O'Dowd first came to the fore only four years ago in a six round bout with one Al Johnson. Until last night he had not knocked out anybody of consequence. While always had been conceded that he was a good boxer and a better mixer he was not regarded as possessing a knockout punch.

Middleweight class in America has been productive of more disputes as to title than any other division of pugilism. The only champions whose right to the honors was not questioned were Jack Dempsey, Bob Fitzsimmons, Tommy Hyman and Stanley Ketchel. Despite the fact that none of the champions of the middleweight class has been able to defend his title, Ketchel was the last to hold the title.

During the period of the London rules the middleweights were overshadowed by the heavyweights, and no one in the former class was able to establish a prominence. Tommy Chandler was first to lay claim to the title, but it was snatched from him by George Rouse. The latter seems to have held the championship for six years, when Mike Donovan took it.

Donovan was a bare knuckle fighter of renown, who later became boxing instructor of the New York Athletic Club and is now teaching O'Dowd's style. How to hit, stop and get away. As opponents for Donovan were few the title was held for a long time. The champion of the famous "Three Jacks" of that period—Sullivan, Dempsey and McAuliffe.

End of Dempsey's Reign. Dempsey appeared to outlast the field and got along swimmingly until Bob Fitzsimmons, the Freckled Fury of Timaru, arrived on the scene. This marked the end of Dempsey's reign, for he never recovered from the effects of the beating he received from Fitz.

The one setback that Dempsey received was his defeat by Fitz. The result of the fight was a knockout. George La Blanche, known on the championship in 1899, knocking out Dempsey in the fourth round. But the La Blanche, who was a very strong fighter, was defeated by Dempsey in the fourth round.

Ketchel Regains Title.

Eighty days later Ketchel returned the compliment by knocking out Papke and regaining title. He held the championship until his untimely death in 1910.

Then began a scramble for the title by a cluster of middleweights, at the head of which were Jack Dillon, Frank Klaus, Eddie McGorty, Billy Papke, Hugo Kelly and many others. Mike Hibbons and Jeff Smith were writers at the time, and he barely had got settled on his throne when he was knocked off by a blow from Billy Papke, the Illinois Thunderbolt.

These performances gave Klaus a valid claim on the American title and he proceeded to clinch the world's championship by stopping George Carpenter, middleweight champion of Europe, in nineteen rounds at Dieppe, France, June 24, 1912.

Klaus Gains World's Title.

By way of good measure Klaus beat Moreau and Heine, the two French middleweights, in the first round of his championship of that country. Carpenter.

Klaus next took on Billy Papke at Paris on March 8, 1913, and stopped the champion in the first round. The fight was a very close one, but Klaus was able to win.

TARSKY INCREASES LEAD.

Beats Kreuter, 150 to 40, in Second Block of Billiard Match. Special Dispatch to The Sun. SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Frank Tarsky further increased his lead over Ralph Kreuter of New York in the championship billiard match by winning the second block by the score of 150 to 40. Tarsky held his opponent scoreless in seven of the six frames, and to one point in three of the remaining frames. Kreuter seemed to be affected by nervousness, although at the end of the first inning he led Tarsky by 27 to 10.

BARROW WISPLA FOR NEW LEAGUE VICTORY

Minors, by 11 to 2 Vote, Oppose Formation of Third Major Circuit.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 14.—There will be no formation of a new quasi third major league to include the Louisville, Indianapolis and Toledo clubs of the American Association, and certain clubs of the International League. This was definitely decided today when the National Association of Baseball Leagues voted down an amendment resolution offered by Edward Barrow, president of the International League, to redistrict every minor league in the country. The vote was 11 to 2.

The original resolution, drafted by the committee on revision of the constitution, had provided for the redistricting of only the smaller leagues of the country. President Barrow caused a surprise, however, by offering an amendment to include all leagues in the new formation. The resolution could be formed.

There was stormy debate on the proposition, but the vote was 11 to 2. The resolution could be formed. There was stormy debate on the proposition, but the vote was 11 to 2.

International Meeting.

President Barrow of the International League was unwilling tonight to make any prediction as to whether his organization would take the field next season. The club owners will meet in New York on December 10 to take whatever steps are necessary to take whatever steps are necessary to take whatever steps are necessary.

What About the International Now?

The Union League proposition is deadlier than a doornail. The cause of the standstillers in the American Association was just and accordingly they triumphed at Louisville. Garry Hermann stated the case very aptly when he said that the recognition of the Union League would make every league franchise only a scrap of paper.

HIGH LIGHTS AND SHADOWS
IN ALL SPHERES OF SPORT

BY DANIEL. EVEN should Pittsburgh, for the third successive year, come through this football season without a defeat it will lay claim to the Eastern championship. A good deal has been written of late regarding Pitt's assigning itself the title, but Karl Davis, graduate manager of athletics at Pitt, declares that it is not the intention of the university to claim anything except a clean record both as to victories and sportsmanship.

Pitt realizes that this is not a normal season in football—that it has been fortunate in keeping some of its experienced men and developing first class players to take the places of those who went into national service. It realizes that some of its opponents have been hit hard by the war, so it wants to go on record as claiming no championship. It will enter no claim possibly out of some respect for Harvard, Yale and Princeton, this year out of the arena. Certainly the Big Three never would yield a similar courtesy to Pitt.

It is very likely that no matter what Pitt's stand in the matter is the football critics of the East will be quite unanimous in awarding the top honors to Glenn Warner's eleven. And, please, should any writer desire to give the title to Pitt don't let him make it an "informal" championship.

As to "Informal" All America Elevens.

While on the subject of this term "informal" used so glibly by the Big Three we are reminded of the recent assertion by Walter Camp that possibly he would select an "informal" All America team. Mr. Camp is quite undecided as to what he will do this year. He has a mind to make no selections at all, but he realizes that such action in some quarters be construed as unjust and biased, particularly in view of Mr. Camp's coming from Yale, which is supporting no varsity eleven. If Mr. Camp is to make any choices at all he should leave that tag "informal" off them.

Robert Is Released and Conroy Returns.

A veteran goes and a veteran comes. Having enjoyed to the full a Federal League wartime contract Hans Robert has been given his unconditional release. As Robert goes, Wild Conroy comes back to New York in the capacity of a player. Robert came to the Yankees in 1916 in the deal that sent Catcher Adams, Stock and Demaree to the Phillies. McGraw was in dire need of a third baseman, but Robert never gave him much assistance, as it turned out that his final season with the Yankees was his final year as a real big leaguer. Thirteen years of service had left Robert's thirty-two-year-old bones a bit brittle. Now, at the age of thirty-five, Robert seeks a position as a coach.

Wild Conroy will be remembered as the Yankee third baseman of the Griffith regime. Conroy came here from Pittsburgh when the Yankees opened in 1903, and he stayed through 1908. Then he went to Washington, where he was joined by Kid Elberfeld. Later Wild became a manager in the New York State League, with Elmira. The State League will not open next season unless the Sunday baseball amendment is passed, so Conroy was only too glad to hand back with the Yankees. Bill is a proper citizen and he knows a lot of baseball. He's bound to make good.

DIXIE COLLEGE FIRST TO HIRE GOLF 'PRO'

Sewanee Shows the Way by Engaging Cowan of Stockbridge, Mass.

The University of the South, known as Sewanee, has asked Stockbridge, Mass., professional of the Stockbridge, Mass. Golf Club, to its list of athletic coaches. Cowan, who usually commands fancy prices for his work, will be at the service of the students on their payment of a nominal fee to the university. This is said to be the first instance where a university has hired a professional golfer exclusively for the benefit of its student body.

Cowan has just arrived at Sewanee, but has already been several times over the university's nine hole course, which is laid out through a wonderful panorama of mountain scenery.

He declares that with the expenditure of a comparatively modest sum the course can be made one of the finest and most beautiful in America. Under his guidance the course would be laid out through a wonderful panorama of mountain scenery.

Folsom Indicts U. S. G. A.

L. R. Folsom, under whose presidency the Woodland Golf Club made so valiant a fight for Francis Ouimet, retired from the club on Tuesday night. Robert M. Wason was elected in his place. Mr. Folsom's address was an arrangement of the United States Golf Association. He said:

"I think the most disappointing incident during my official connection with the club was the failure of our efforts to have Francis Ouimet as an association member. We made an honest effort, we spent time and money, but we were unsuccessful. It was a disappointment, but we must accept it as a lesson."

"If a referendum vote of the golfers in America had been taken on the matter, our standing of the club would have won by an overwhelming majority. The time will come, and that speedily, when justice will be meted out to Francis Ouimet. He has been called upon to play a more serious game than the game of golf, and I have every reason to believe that as a soldier he will win our continued confidence and esteem."

In Mr. Folsom's review of the club's history, he said that in twenty-one years ago, he said that in complete control of the course and the next step should be a new clubhouse. He urged that the new administration of affairs at Woodland consider the plan and when the time comes to speedily put it through.

Ouimet Unable to Play.

Arranging golf matches in which star players are to appear is not always smooth sailing. It now transpires that Francis Ouimet will be unable to take part in the four day match which will be played on the links of the Englewood Country Club. Original plans called for Ouimet and Jesse Guifford to meet Conroy and Jimmy Anderson.

Instead of talking everything over, however, the match will be decided, the change being that Jerome Traverser will play in place of Ouimet.

Kirkley said last night that he considered such a combination sufficient to attract a gallery, and a gallery is desired for the reason that the match was arranged for the benefit of the C. A. entertainment fund. Traverser will have Guifford for a partner. On his part, Guifford would be capable of a good shot, and a gallery is desired for the reason that the match was arranged for the benefit of the C. A. entertainment fund.

Traverser has decided to get in a practice round at Englewood today. Neither has played much of late, though so far as Kirkley has concerned it is not likely that he will play. Englewood links means just one good round after another.

A week from next Saturday, November 24, the original match will be played at Englewood. The match will be played at Englewood. The match will be played at Englewood.
